POOR WHISKEY SOLD

IN THIS STATE Only Fifty of 123 Samples Were Found to Be Full Alcoholic Strength.

The Connecticut Experiment station recently set out to test the whisker sold in this state. Agents of the sta-tion obtained 123 samples of common bar whiskey in six cities of the state-Norwich, New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury and New London. The conclusion formed as a re-sult of the investigation were that "on the generous assumption that a genune whiskey is one showing from 45 to 50 per cent. of grain alcohol, not over 0.5 per cent. of non-volatile solids, and not over 10 per cent. of color insoluble in amyl alcohol, only thirteen of the samples can be considered to be above suspicion as to their puri-to have an excess of solids, sugar syrup or glycerine probably having been added; 110 were artificially col-ored, and in seventeen cases when half pint had been asked for and pair for but seven ounces were delivered

Bad Enough in New Haven.

Of the sixty-one samples from New Haven, only two lacked the re-quired eight cunces to the half pint, but thirty-four were below strength in their volume of alcohol, eighteen were doctored with an excess of solids, and all but seven were too highly colored. Highly Colored in Bridgeport.

In Bridgeport twelve samples tak-en showed in two cases a shortage in quantity, in ten cases deficient strength, in two cases an excess solids, and excess of color in all. Ditto Waterbury.

Waterbury fourteen samples taken. One lacked in quantity, were taken. One lacked in quantity, eight were below strength, four were loaded with solids, and all had ex-More Honest in Norwich.

In some cases he is cheated by getting only seven ounces. In more than half the cases -seventy-three out of 123, to be accurate—he gets watered whiskey of less than 45 per cent. strength. In twenty-six cases out of 123—about one in five—the thinning with water is supplemented by thickening with syrup, glycerine or sugar (a sample taken in New Haven, tested nearly 20 per cent, sucrose, or cane sugar).

Thirteen Out of 123. In only thirteen cases of these 123 samples was no excess of color found, and it is interesting to note that these same thirteen samples contained from 43 to 52 per cent. of alcohol, and only from 0.1 to 0.171 per cent. of solids, so that in every particular, not only in the color test, they came appreciably near the commonly accepted standards for pure whiskey. Only one of these was bought in Hartford, seven came from New Haven, three from Nor-wich, and two from New London, while ont one of the samples taken in either Waterbury or Bridgeport met these tests.

High-Priced Just as Bad.

Whether better grades of whiskey or whiskey from better establishments than athese 123 selected at random would disclose any better results after analysis, the experiment station has not determined. In one case, in New Haven, where the half-pint flask cost 30 cents, however, the volume of alcohol was somewhat below standard, rating 43.46 per cent, the solids were $.471 per cent, just under the 0.5 per cent. permissible, and the color ran away up to 83.2 per cent, instead of less than ten. From this one sample, one can hardly conclude that high-priced whiskey gives much better return High-Priced Just as Bad. can hardly conclude that high-priced whiskey gives much better return for the money than the cheap stuff. The experiment station did not conduct this investigation as part of any temperance crusade; but in the regular course of its work in analyzing the various articles which come under the provisions of the pure food and drug law, in an effort to obtain the enforcement of that statute.
